Oklahoma City National Memorial

Seconds after an explosion rocked the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building on April 19, 1995, rescue efforts began. Tour attendees will hear the first-hand accounts of Oklahoma Emergency Management Director Albert Ashwood and bombing survivor Terri Talley. Ashwood arrived on scene just 25 minutes after the explosion to search for victims, including his sister-in-law. Talley survived being buried in rubble. They'll share remarkable stories of strength, courage and resilience.

After hearing from Ashwood and Talley, tour attendees will have the opportunity to explore the museum that's been called "powerful, emotional and inspiring." The recently renovated museum includes state-of-the-art technology, interactive touch screen displays and new displays of artifacts. Visitors will also experience the Outdoor Symbolic Memorial featuring 168 illuminated chairs facing a reflecting pool.
